Take twelve months;

Clean them thoroughly from bitterness, avarice, pedantry, and fear, Cut each month into thirty or thirty-one equal parts, So that this stock will last for a whole year.

Each part will be prepared separately And arranged with one part of working and two parts of cheerfulness and good humour, Then three big spoons heaped with optimism are added , As well as one small spoon of tolerance, One grain of irony and a pinch of tactfulness. Finally everything will be flavoured abundantly with lots of love.

It is recommended to adorn this dinner with small bouquets of attentiveness and serve it daily with serenity and a glas of red wine.

Johann Wolfgang von Goethes mother*
